

Abstract

A method of providing a product line comprising a plurality of doors, wherein each door comprises at least one working surface, the method comprising the steps of providing a product line of doors having at least one customer-selectable option, wherein the at least one option includes a feature of one of the working surfaces, and receiving an order comprising a selection of at least one door of the product line of doors, wherein the order includes selection of at least one door and a selection of at least one option for the working surface.

10 MAH/8554